

PUBLIC SPLIT ON ISSUE OF LAWS
BANNING INTERRACIAL MARRIAGES

PRINCETON, N.J., March 9 -- The constitutionality of a Virginia law which makes it a crime for a white person and a Negro to marry is now being weighed in the courts. The decision could affect similar laws in eighteen other states.

As the courts wrestle with the constitutionality of the law, the Gallup Poll assigned its staff of interviewers to talk to persons across the nation to see how public opinion stands on the issue.

Nationwide, opinion is nearly evenly split. Forty-eight per cent of adults approve of laws prohibiting interracial marriage, while 46 per cent say they disapprove; 6 per cent are unable to express an opinion one way or the other.

Even Southern Negroes are not entirely opposed to these laws. Nearly three out of ten

Outside the South, one Negro in seven holds this view

both Negroes and white persons across the nation:

"Some states have laws making it a crime for a white person and a Negro to marry. Do you approve or disapprove of such laws?"

The results:

LAWS MAKING INTERRACIAL

--Nationwide--

Southern Whites

Approve of such a law	72%
Disapprove	24
No opinion	4

(MORE)

Views of Whites Outside South

Approve of such a law	42%
Disapprove	52
No Opinion	6

An analysis of the results shows that a person's views on this issue depend, to a great extent, on the level of education he has attained, and on his religion.

A large majority (69 per cent) of those with college training disapprove of existing laws which prohibit marriages between the races. A similar trend is observed among those with high school education.

prohibiting interracial marriages.

A majority of Protestants approve of laws against interracial marriage, while a majority of Catholics hold the opposite view.

The states which have these laws are: Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Maryland,

Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina,

(30)